“ I’m sorry for your loss, I did not know Mrs Phillips. I just barely moved to Sale Creek TN about 4 months ago. I visit Dayton a lot and I’m getting to know the people around that area and I’ve noticed people around here are very kind. They say “good morning” or “how are you?” Just by looking at the picture posted for her obituary, she seems like that kind of person, a very sweet person. Grief is what’s left behind for those who were close to her. Time will heal this bitter pain. But the key of healing is what you do with your time. While feeling sad, it is best to force yourself to focus in some type of activity like reading, sight seeing or some type of physical activities. Also being close to God by praying and reading the Bible is good for the soul. A verse from the Bible in part says “find God and he will be close to you”. So I say to those that were close to Mrs Phillips, stay active and seek God so you can start this slow process of healing. My condolences.
