“ We regret we were unable to make the visitation but Myra was a fine lady. She was usually quite but was cordial and I never heard her complain. Being quite as she was, she had a wonderful sense of humor. I remember one evening at church she told a story of her "Red Bloomers"; I knew then she wasn't shy. It was a hilarious story but now she has a new one; it may not be hilarious but I'll bet it will make us look forward to leaving this old world behind. She is now in the prescence of our Creator and has achieved her goal. May God bless all who knew her and grantv peace and comfort to her family.
